The Journal of Border Educational Research

Submission Guidelines

The Journal welcomes a wide variety of submissions. These might include field-based experiences or action research, descriptions of successful practices to promote school improvement, the application of research to the design and delivery of educational programs, experimental, correlational or observational studies, position papers, reviews of literature, thesis and dissertation abstracts, and book reviews. Generally, articles selected are those written in an informal, practical, and readable format.

The Journal of Border Educational Research also advocates for the expansion of university services and outreach to public schools through research on innovative school practices. Some topics you might consider are partnership initiatives between schools and universities, educator preparation programs, curriculum initiatives, and collaborative research.
